International Bible Lesson Commentary

Amos 5:10-27

(Amos 5:10) They hate him that rebuketh in the gate, and they abhor him that speaketh uprightly.

Through Amos, God described some of the character traits of those He would soon judge and condemn to death or exile when the Assyrians invaded and destroyed the Kingdom of Israel. "The gate" was the courtroom at the city gate often built into the city wall where the elders of the city heard cases and passed judgment. Whenever a judge ruled against someone for their immoral acts, the one judged hated the judge rather than repent and obey God and God's commands. Furthermore, they hated, detested, despised, and abhorred the person who told them the truth about them and how they needed to conform to the ways of God. Unfortunately, as we learn from Amos, Israel had very few righteous elders or judges who ruled justly and spoke the truth.

(Amos 5:11) Forasmuch therefore as your treading is upon the poor, and ye take from him burdens of wheat: ye have built houses of hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them; ye have planted pleasant vineyards, but ye shall not drink wine of them.

The Bible does not condemn someone for being wealthy. The Bible does not condone or promote warfare between people of different economic backgrounds and classes. The Bible does condemn acquiring wealth in immoral and unjust ways. The Bible tells people to care for the poor, and the Law of God in the Old Testament gives rules on how the poor could and should work for their food (see the Book of Ruth). In the Kingdom of Israel, many wealthy people had built large houses and planted large vineyards by taxing the poor and charging outrageous rent to keep them enslaved. God condemned their unloving and unjust actions, and God condemned them to death or exile away from their home and vineyards, to where they could not drink the wine of their vineyards.

(Amos 5:12) For I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins: they afflict the just, they take a bribe, and they turn aside the poor in the gate from their right.

God through Amos became more detailed in why He would judge the Kingdom of Israel. God sees what people do; how people treat others, and how people are treated by others. God sees the sins and transgressions of people, especially the sins of those who know the Law of God and who violate His laws with arrogance and disbelief that God will punish them. God sees every time a sinner afflicts someone who is righteous, especially when that sinner claims to be a follower of God. A person who is righteous is in a right relationship with God because as he lives by faith in God he loves and obeys God. God sees the sinner who offers, gives, or receives a bribe, and God sees those who suffer and are denied justice because of bribes. God sees when a judge or powerful or wealthy person pushes aside a needy person who is seeking justice at the gate, the courtroom in the Kingdom of Israel.

(Amos 5:13) Therefore the prudent shall keep silence in that time; for it is an evil time.

Amos wrote advice similar to Proverbs 10:19—“When words are many, transgression is not lacking, but the prudent are restrained in speech.” The times were so evil in Israel, and the powerful and wealthy rulers and the religious and business leaders in Israel were so evil and unjust that they afflicted the righteous and the needy; therefore, God advised the wise person to be careful and keep quiet. While keeping quiet, the righteous and wise person could still pray. The righteous person would do what God said through Amos: “For thus says the LORD to the house of Israel: Seek me and live. . . . Seek the LORD and live, or he will break out against the house of Joseph like fire, and it will devour Bethel, with no one to quench it (Amos 5:4, 6).

(Amos 5:14) Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live: and so the LORD, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken.

Those doing evil could repent and return to God as Amos preached, but since they refused to hear the truth and abhorred the one who spoke the truth, they would not repent. While preaching to the unrepentant, Amos also spoke God's words to the righteous person who is prudent. The righteous person will seek good and not evil, unlike his oppressors in Israel; therefore, the righteous person will live with God forever even though he or she may die as a martyr at the hands of the unrighteous Israelites or Assyrians. No matter what happens, the LORD of an angelic army will be with the righteous.

(Amos 5:15) Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate: it may be that the LORD God of hosts will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph.

God called Amos to preach a message of repentance and return to faith, a message of hope, but the Kingdom of Israel would not turn back to the LORD. The righteous person can and is commanded to hate evil, while he can love his enemy and pray that his enemy comes to repentance and faith in God. Joseph was a righteous brother out of his 12 brothers, and he saved his family because God is gracious. God would save a righteous remnant, but Amos held out the promise that if the people began to practice and receive justice in their relationships and in the courts then God would save the Kingdom of Israel, but they would not repent and God had to destroy the Kingdom as just punishment for their sins and as a warning to others.

(Amos 5:16) Therefore the LORD, the God of hosts, the Lord, saith thus; Wailing shall be in all streets; and they shall say in all the highways, Alas! alas! and they shall call the husbandman to mourning, and such as are skilful of lamentation to wailing.

Amos foretold what would happen if the leaders of the people continued to act and judge unjustly. The destruction of the Kingdom of Israel and the judgment of God would serve as a warning to other nations and people, but the Kingdom of Judah did not listen or learn from the example of their northern neighbor; therefore Judah was destroyed in 586 BC and again in 70 AD. The wailing Amos described could be compared to the crying throughout Egypt on the night of the first Passover when God freed the Israelites from slavery. No city, town, or farm would be spared the conquest of the Assyrian army.

(Amos 5:17) And in all vineyards shall be wailing: for I will pass through thee, saith the LORD.

As God passed through Egypt, essentially for the same injustices that were now being perpetrated by the wicked rich and powerful in Israel, so God would pass through Israel. As Amos declared earlier, the vineyards and the wine they produced would pass to others, to the enemies of Israel. Those who practiced evil for unjust gain would lose everything they thought they had gained. Having turned from God, they would never live with God unless they repented and returned to faith in God.

(Amos 5:18) Woe unto you that desire the day of the LORD! to what end is it for you? the day of the LORD is darkness, and not light.

Those who desired the “day of the LORD” were primarily the religious leaders, and the powerful business and political leaders who wanted to increase their control over others and their wealth by the LORD or the Messiah coming and defeating all of their neighbors in battle so they could have their land, their slaves, and other possessions. Their gods were wealth and power, not the true God. But the day of the Lord will be a day of darkness and judgment and death for the unrighteous and unjust leaders with their idols in the Kingdom of Israel.

(Amos 5:19) As if a man did flee from a lion, and a bear met him; or went into the house, and leaned his hand on the wall, and a serpent bit him.

The day of the LORD would come upon Israel’s neighbors, but it would also come upon the Kingdom of Israel. On the day of the Lord, life for fleeing sinners would go from bad to worse. If they were not killed by a symbolic lion, they would be killed by a symbolic bear; if not by an archer then by a swordsman. They would die because they chose not to seek the Lord and live; instead they sought evil. They would not even be safe in their own home: the large and luxurious home that they had made of stone would not protect them from the invader and death.

(Amos 5:20) Shall not the day of the LORD be darkness, and not light? even very dark, and no brightness in it?

The light shined in the darkness when Jesus came a little more than 700 years after the fall of the Kingdom of Israel, and Jesus preached in both the northern and southern kingdoms when He came. During the destruction of the Kingdom of Israel, there was no light and no truth, no prophet (or profit) and no promise, no hope and no brightness. Amos preached only gloom and judgment for the nation, which came in 722 BC.

(Amos 5:21) I hate, I despise your feast days, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies.

God hated their festivals and assemblies because they were performed before idols created by Jeroboam I (two gold bulls) that the priests had given the name of the LORD. Furthermore, the Israelites who were unjust and wicked thought they could steal from and oppress the poor and the righteous and they could escape God’s punishment because of their participation in religious rituals. God said He hated their attitude, false beliefs, and unjust treatment of others.

(Amos 5:22) Though ye offer me burnt offerings and your meat offerings, I will not accept them: neither will I regard the peace offerings of your fat beasts.

God will not look upon the offerings and sacrifices of wicked people. Many rich and powerful leaders in the Kingdom of Israel could afford to offer multitudes of offerings and animals to God because they had stolen from the poor and the righteous. Of course, God would accept the offerings and sacrifices of the righteous, of those who did what God said, of those who sought God and good.

(Amos 5:23) Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols.

From people whose hearts were far from Him, God did not want to hear songs that they sang supposedly in praise of Him. He did not want to hear songs: from people whose hearts sought unjust gain, who oppressed the poor, who stole from the righteous, who used their ill-gotten wealth to build larger houses and expand their land holdings and their vineyards.

(Amos 5:24) But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.

Instead of hypocritical worship, God wanted a nation or kingdom with individuals who upheld justice and righteousness in the law courts, in places of worship, and in personal relationships. God wanted a kingdom that promoted justice and righteousness in all aspects of life at all times even as an ever-flowing stream. Israel, the northern kingdom, and later Judah, the southern kingdom, refused to uphold and promote justice and righteousness in their kingdoms; instead the powerful and wealthy took advantage of their positions over others to steal from the less fortunate and God-fearing people.

(Amos 5:25) Have ye offered unto me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?

During their wilderness wandering God fed the Israelites quail and manna; therefore, sacrifices on a large scale, as in the days of King David and King Solomon, were not possible. The Israelites gave what they could to the LORD during their time in the wilderness before entering the Promised Land, and their offerings enabled Moses to build the tabernacle for worship, create the priests' garments, and fashion other implements for worship. The "house of Israel" as a separate kingdom was not literally established until after King Solomon's death; therefore, the "house of Israel" never literally offered sacrifices to the true God in the wilderness or to the true God in the northern kingdom.

(Amos 5:26) But ye have borne the tabernacle of your Moloch and Chiun your images, the star of your god, which ye made to yourselves.

Except for the time Aaron misled the Hebrews to worship the golden calf he created during their wilderness wandering, the Hebrews worshiped the LORD in the wilderness as God directed through Moses. In the Kingdom of Israel, the priests misled the people to worship idols. In addition to worshiping idols with God's name given to them by their leaders to mislead the people, the religious leaders also led them to worship the idols of their enemies; such as, Sukkuth and Kaiwan.

(Amos 5:27) Therefore will I cause you to go into captivity beyond Damascus, saith the LORD, whose name is The God of hosts.

Because the house of Israel had become totally corrupt, so corrupt it would not listen to those who spoke the truth and afflicted the righteous and the poor, they would reap what they sowed. They would lose everything, just as those they stole from had lost everything at their wicked hands. Only those who sought the LORD would live eternally with the LORD because they lived by faith in the LORD.

Questions for Discussion and Thinking Further

1. Why do you think God sent Amos from the Kingdom of Judah to preach as a prophet in the Kingdom of Israel?
2. Did God condemn all wealthy people through Amos message? Give a reason for your answer.
3. Why did many of the political and religious leaders in Israel keep looking for the promised "Day of the LORD" with eager expectation?
4. What did Amos say the "Day of the LORD" would mean for Israel?
5. What hope did Amos give the repentant and righteous?
